Johnny, run out, overtake your father, give him these letters to mail. That is old.

After the Aquitania left Cherbourg harbor and started across the ocean a flying machine started from London, overtook the ship and dropped on her deck three letters to be mailed to business firms in New York. That is new.

Many women worry when their cheeks begin to sag and fine wrinkles come in the skin on the [illegible]. If they get fat, they squeeze themselves. If thin, they [illegible] false curls.

If they can afford it they buy ridiculously made, expensive clothing. If one can't afford it they buy cheap imitations of expensive clothing. Their worry about age [illegible]

Women that worry about age should have seen Marie Curie, the French scientist, at [illegible] There was a woman in middle age, small, pale, with earnest deepset gray eyes, intensely concentrated, [illegible] her brain to give knowledge to human beings, bringing with her to this country the fine daughters that she has given to the race.

That is a middle age worth while. You could have brought all the girls from Mr. Ziegfeld's Midnight Frolics into that room with their [illegible] And they would have attracted no attention. A real woman was there worth looking at.

The trouble is that civilization has not made it difficult for women to be [illegible]. Man's stupidity and selfishness set a premium on immature youth. But civilization still shows the picture that [illegible], the great Frenchman, put on his canvas, "Man and the Earth." The man in the [illegible] the young woman holds the handles of the plow, two old women hitched up PULLING THE PLOW.

That will change in time. The day is coming when women will be admired for the quality of their brains, not merely for hair, skin, teeth and other passing skin-deep charms.

Carpentier, French fighter, arrives in America. His first question is: "Whom do I fight after I have beaten Dempsey?" That is the right spirit. Not to be afraid of your man is 50 per cent of the problem, especially when he is younger and bigger.

Carpentier brings his own cook. The French understand, and we do not, the importance of the cook. A man is what he eats. And if Carpentier, no longer young, is able after five years of fighting in the trenches to knock out good fighters in three rounds, it is because he has always known what good food and real temperance mean. France is not cursed by whiskey OR ice water.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., asks "Will civilization survive?" A reasonable question. The earth, tiny speck in the visible universe, is, relatively, as unimportant as one baby in the slums of a great city.

Among human beings we have criminals, hunchbacks, idiots, epileptics, all sorts of failures. What happens to individuals may happen to planets.

Certainly this earth of ours, for the last ten thousand years, has acted like Jesse James, the highwayman, an Indian thug or a pyromaniac, but not like a well-balanced normal creature. Our record of murder, plague, starvation, cruelty, ignorance and brutality justifies Mr. Rockefeller's question, "Will civilization survive?" No wonder the other planets don't speak to us. Our hands are too bloody and our hearts too selfish.

Good Mary, Queen of England, whose dresses always reach her ankles, no matter what others may do, and who wears such a hat as General Grant's wife used to wear, has decided that tango dancing is permissible, but only for young people. Old people must not dance the fancy steps at the palace. Humbly it is suggested that this is wrong. The old, not the young, need fancy steps to lure them from their gloom and rheumatism. A young girl or boy can find in the Virginia reel, polka, or blue Danube waltz all thrills and rainbows imaginable. Let the old tango and "toddle", they need it.

ASKS LIBERTY

MRS. NEOMA D. HARPER

Mrs. Neoma D. Harper, twenty-eight years old, has filed suit for separate support from her husband, William [illegible] Harper, [illegible] years old, real estate broker of Boston and [illegible].

Mrs. Harper is at a private hospital in Roxbury and charges that her husband has failed to pay her board for six weeks.

The trouble between Mr. and Mrs. Harper began some time ago, according to her statement today.

She said: "And to think I used to call him my Petticoat John. He was so fussy about his clothes, especially his pajamas. Why, he wouldn't wear his pajamas unless there were about two or three feet of embroidery on the bottom of the trousers.

"He used to [illegible] for three years before I finally consented and I can't see now what [illegible] with me then.

"When we were married I was [illegible] in a million dollar hotel in [illegible] and made about $200 a month. I bought him eleven suits of clothes before we were married and he used to write me the mushiest letters you ever read. I often received three and four of these letters and a telegram almost every day. But things have changed.

"He often wrote me letters in which he called me his 'lotus flower,' 'brightest star of the night,' 'a flower on the edge of Winter,' 'a songbird in the midst of battle.' That was when I bought him $7.50 ties and silk shirts."

GROCERY CONCERN DAMAGED

30 Driven to Street by Flames in Building in Market District

More than $25,000 damage was done by fire starting from a short circuit on the top floor of the five-story brick building at Richmond and Fulton streets, North End, early today.

The building is occupied by the [illegible] State Grocery Company and the [illegible] & Baker furniture warehouse.

Difficulty in getting through the congested market section delayed the fire apparatus and Deputy Chief Henry Fox, on his arrival, found it necessary to sound a second alarm.

Investigation showed that [illegible] the Page & Baker warehouse [illegible] day it was found the freight elevator was out of commission and a [illegible] and helper were sent to repair it. While they were at work the [illegible] circuit happened.

Sparks from the feed cable [illegible] apparently into a quantity of [illegible] and oil stored on the upper floor, igniting them. The flames were discovered by two employes of the grocery firm, who warned the [illegible] other employes, all of whom left the building quietly.

After the flames appeared to have been subdued, they broke out again [illegible] and it was necessary to run apparatus [illegible] to the roof. This added [illegible] heavy damage already done by [illegible]

INSISTS ON TERMS OF TREATY

Poland and France Cautioned by Premier in Regard to Upper Silesia

By International News Service.

London, May 18. — Great Britain will not stand aside and see the peace treaty trampled upon declared Premier Lloyd George today in serving a new warning upon Poland.

"Having gone through a great war in which we sustained gigantic losses in defense of the old treaty whereunto this country was a party, Great Britain cannot consent to stand by whilst the peace treaty which our representatives signed less than two years ago is being trampled upon," said the Premier.

"The children of the peace treaty cannot be allowed to break up the crockery of Europe with impunity," continued Lloyd George. "Some one must put out a restraining hand. Otherwise there will be continual trouble. The mists that lie ahead right now are more than usually dense."

(By "children of the peace treaty" the Prime Minister referred to the smaller nations which were created by the Paris peace conference. Poland is one of these nations.)

"British, American and Italian opinion means to apply the peace treaty [illegible] whether for or against Germany. The status of Upper Silesia must be decided by the supreme council, not by Korfanty.

"The peace treaty binds us together. Those who treat its provisions as if they were the sport of fashion may not have to live very long before they regret their hot-headedness."

The Premier's speech was regarded as his rejoinder to the declarations made by Premier Briand of France last Saturday.

The Premier paid his respects to the French press in the following words:

"With all due respect I would say to the French press that the habit of [illegible] every expression of Allied opinion which does not coincide with their own as impertinent is fraught with mischief. This attitude, if persisted in, would be fatal to any entente."

Tad Finds Georges in Barbed Wire Maze

By TAD.

Manhasset, L. I., May 18.—Bees were buzzing, cows were mooing and a phonograph was playing "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean" as we drove up to the vine-covered cottage on the hill where Georges Carpentier is to train for his coming quarrel with Jack Dempsey.

On the picket fence which surrounds the place are two large signs. One reads "Private Grounds," while the other a bit farther along reads "Beware of the Bull."

The fence, which is topped with strands of barbed wire, ran clear around the house. In the back are large barns. A new fence 15 feet high surrounds the barns. This is topped with barbed wire, too, and the chances are that trenches will be built to make headway more intricate for the curious.

DESCHAMPS SHOWS EXCITEMENT

We stopped the rattler in front of the place in order to get a slant. First we wanted to make sure to get one eye on the bull. We did not spot the old boy, but from the side of the house we saw an excited individual suddenly rush out. He was smoking a pill and waving his hands as though playing tag with the bees. It was Monsieur Descamps, manager of Georges Carpentier.

He was yelling at the top of his voice at some moving picture blokes who had set up their machines in readiness to snap the French boxer. "Mon Dieu! allez-vous en!" he chirped. Even the cows in the field yonder stopped chewing.

He continued to yell and wave his hands, then lit another pill, chattering all the while. He had neither hat

How he happened to be at a place several hundred yards from water, the Muddy River, the police said they were unable to explain.

LOWER FARES ON QUINCY LINES

Fifteen Rides for $1 in City Proper, Braintree and Weymouth

The first fare reduction to follow the proposed wage cut on the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company will go into effect on the Quincy division May 23.

Rides will be fifteen instead of thirteen for $1 on that part of the division contained in Quincy proper, Braintree and Weymouth. The Squantum line, the Atlantic spur and other lines are not affected.

A new ticket will be issued which will be good anywhere in the territory mentioned.

Hitherto, a special interurban ticket has been in use in Braintree and Weymouth, causing much inconvenience to persons riding out of Quincy proper to those towns.

Announcement of the lower fares and the issuing of a uniform ticket was made today by the home rule committee of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, which conducts the Quincy division for the public trustees.

BRITAIN SAYS IRISH OUTBREAK WAS AIMED TO BALK PEACE

London, May 18—According to a statement by the Irish office it is declared to be certain that the week-end outbreak of the Sinn Feiners is the result of the desire of the "extreme section" to blast the peace negotiations.

Despite this raid, Universal Service is informed by a high government authority, under no circumstances will such outrages be allowed to interfere with the unofficial negotiations between the government and the Sinn Fein leaders.

Lord Hugh Cecil, one of the members of Parliament most active in urging peace, is now staying at Mount Stewart, the guest of Lord Londonderry. He was interviewed today and said:

"British public opinion would come nearer to favoring independence for Ireland if Ireland would ask for a King from among the princes of the royal house."

A high intelligence officer on the staff of the Irish republican army said there would be peace before many months.

"The peace negotiations have been progressing in an unofficial way," said this officer. "Premier Lloyd George and Eamon de Valera have been kept constantly informed of every step that was taken."

The list of outrages over Sunday continued to increase. Two former soldiers were taken from their beds [illegible] at Kilmanagh. Their bodies were found in a quarry later, one of them being shot dead and the other wounded.

Following an ambush at Athey two young men were shot dead.

A soldier was killed and another wounded in an ambush attack near [illegible].

In Dublin a civilian [illegible] was killed [illegible] the street.

Four houses at Tralee were blown up by the military in reprisal for the ambushes in the vicinity.

The Aughrim [illegible] Forestry School was burned by armed, disguised men.

Two shops were ordered permanently closed in Cork by the military. The owners were accused of using their stores for the benefit of the rebels.

Horace O'Neill, wounded in a Sinn Fein raid in London Sunday, died today. Twelve men and four women are being detained by the police in connection with the raids in London and Liverpool.

Professor Albert Einstein and Mrs. Einstein were guests of Harvard today.

The discoverer of the law of relativity interrupted for a short time his labors in behalf of a reunited Palestine to meet the dignitaries of the Cambridge university and inspect its laboratories.

He and Mrs. Einstein were escorted to Cambridge by Professor Julian L. Coolidge of the mathematics department, head of the American Legion in Harvard, and John U. Nef, graduate manager of Harvard Union.

The visitors were taken to President Lowell's office, where he welcomed them in French. They were introduced to the following assembled educators:

Professors Theodore Lyman of the physics department, head of Jefferson Physical Laboratory; Theodore W. Richards of the chemistry department, former Nobel prize winner, and head of the Gibbs Laboratory; Roscoe Pound, dean of the law school; Charles H. Haskins, dean of the graduate school of arts and sciences; Percy W. Bridgeman of the physics department; William Duane of the bio-physics department, and Professor MacMechan of Dalhousie University, Canada, who was visiting Harvard.

Professor Einstein later went through the various laboratories. He was still later guest of honor at a reception in Harvard Union, attended by about 500 students.

Professor Einstein had a few hours before made a stirring plea for the objects of the Zionist movement at a meeting in the American House.

Jewry of Boston responded loyally to the appeals made by Dr. Einstein and Dr. Chaim Weizmann, inventor of the explosive TNT, also a member of the delegation, and thousands of dollars were pledged to the fund.

Seated at the banquet table with Mr. and Mrs. Einstein and Mr. and Mrs. Weizmann were Mendel Ussischkin and Dr. Ben Zion Mossinsohn, members of the delegation.

The direct appeal for funds was made by Rabbi H. Raphael Gold, of Temple Adath Jeshurun.

DANCERS

Hundreds of Simmons girls took part in the "May Day exercises," an important and artistic feature of which was out-of-door dancing. Miss Jane Solod (shown above) will dance on June 4 at the Harriman estate in Newton in a garden fete in behalf of the endowment fund.

Simmons College added considerably to its reputation as a nursery for open-air dancers today by the artistic performance given by the girls participating in the annual "May Day" exercises.

Hundreds of girls took part. The "Dance of the Ocean at Sunrise" and the ancient "Maypole Dance" were performed with as much spirit and grace as if the undergraduates had been professionals.

Miss [illegible] Ward of Springfield, Vt., president of the senior class, was crowned queen. She was "wakened at sunrise" with music. Her "King" was [illegible] of [illegible], N. Y., and her [illegible] of Norwich, Ct.

BOY AND WIDOW DISAPPEAR

New Bedford Police Believe They Occupied Robbed Summer Cottage

New Bedford, May 18.—Mrs. [illegible] Hazel Whitten, attractive widow of thirty-five years, with a daughter fifteen, is missing from her home in Acushnet. So is sixteen-year-old George E. Terry of the same town.

The disappearance of the pair is seen as the sequel to a court order probationing the youth, on his father's stubborn child charge, on condition he shun Mrs. Whitten's company.

Likewise New Bedford detectives are investigating the robbery of house furnishings from the summer cottage of Dana H. [illegible] at Long Pond, Acushnet, as another sequel. It is said that a youth and a woman of Mrs. Whitten's age occupied the cottage for several days and that the furniture was loaded into an automobile which bore the registry number of [illegible]—that of Mrs. Whitten's car.

Lending spice to the reports which were made by Edward D. Sherman, a summer cottager at Long Pond, is his description of the woman's attire—a man's riding breeches, puttees and flannel shirt. Absence of a hat revealed the hair of a comely woman.

Mrs. Whitten and young Terry vanished on Friday last. The day before both appeared in the Second District Court of Fall River, Terry on the stubborn child charge, Mrs. Whitten as a witness.

His father, Charles F. Terry, complained to the court that he could not keep the boy away from Mrs. Whitten.

The court, however, released the youth on probation which conditioned that he must return to his parents' home and keep away from the pretty widow.

Neither young Terry nor the widow returned to their homes after leaving the court house.

MISS CURIE BANS SOCIAL WHIRL

Daughter of Famous Woman Scientist Prefers Work in Laboratory

New York, May 18.—Mlle. Irene Curie, daughter of Mme. Marie Curie, discoverer of radium, has had her first [illegible] with American reporters.

Mlle. Irene is twenty-three years old, served as her mother's laboratory assistant in radium research and during the war was an assistant professor in the Sorbonne. She is not a social butterfly, dresses almost as simply as the mother and confesses that she has no time to waste on social affairs.

She told reporters that, while she did not feel that it would be possible to follow scientific pursuits and be a social butterfly at the same time, she had no objection to an occasional dance, providing it did not interfere with an experiment.

"My mother did not say to me or my sister that she wished us to take up scientific studies," Mlle. Curie said. "She did say it was well to be seriously at work at something in which we were interested so that we might be of value and independent. But we saw how hard our parents worked and became interested."

She explained the latest improvements in methods of treating cancer with radium and added:

"Although treatment by radium is not perfected to the point where advanced cases can be cured, many patients can be saved from much suffering by radium treatments even where a complete cure is impossible."

BANKER CHARGES 4-YEAR LIAISON

Stillman Swears Wife and Indian Guide Became Friends in May, 1917

New York, May 18.—Fred K. Beauvais, so-called Indian Apollo, lived with Mrs. Fifi Potter Stillman at her home at Pocantico Hills, Westchester County, according to the original complaint in the divorce action of James A. Stillman.

This complaint, which became public today, was served on Mrs. Stillman on July 8 last in her stateroom on the White Star liner Olympic as she was about to sail for Europe.

It sets forth that "on information and belief" the defendant was unfaithful since the first day of May, 1917, alleging that Mrs. Stillman had lived with Beauvais from that date.

The complaint recites the various places at which the alleged unfaithfulness took place, including Grande Anse and "on the St. Maurice River," hotels in Montreal and "the house of plaintiff and defendant, Anne U. Stillman, at Pocantico Hills, Westchester County, State of New York."

The plaintiff, it was further declared, had not lived with the defendant since the discovery of the alleged liaison with Fred Beauvais. It was also stated that the only issue of the Stillman marriage were Anne Stillman, James Stillman and Alexander Stillman.

Continuing the complaint alleged that since the commencement of the alleged liaison, and on or about the 7th day of November, 1918, the defendant gave birth to a child, the co-defendant, Guy Stillman. This child, according to the complaint, was not the child of the plaintiff, but was illegitimate, and "upon information and belief" was the child of Fred Beauvais.

The plaintiff demanded a divorce, custody of Anne, James and Alexander Stillman and determination of the legitimacy of Guy Stillman.

The document closes with the affidavit of James A. Stillman to the truth of the complaint.

Sniffs in Vain for Whiff of 'Psychic' Perfume

Have you smelled the "spook perfume"?

It is called "psychic perfume" by its discoverer, Mrs. Mary M. Evilly Helwig, who describes it as "lovely, haunting and unearthly."

Although Mrs. Helwig is a Washington woman, Boston psychics are particularly interested in the "discovery," for the "spook scent" was given its first demonstration here.

The demonstration was before Professor Daniel F. Comstock, formerly of Technology, now vice president of Kalmus & Wescott, chemical and electrical engineers.

CALLS ON "GOD OF PERFUME."

He sat in a semi-darkened room with the lady while she made a few passes with her hands and called upon Meslom, oriental god of perfume, to send the odor into the room.

Mrs. Helwig, according to an interview given out on her return to Washington, is evidently confident that she convinced the Boston scientist of her ability to produce the "spook perfume."

PROFESSOR NOT SO SURE.

Professor Comstock, with every desire to be gallant, is not so sure. He told a Boston American reporter that he "smelled as hard as ever he could" but could not sense the "lovely, haunting, unearthly smell."

Mrs. Helwig stoutly maintains that she is able to produce the ghostly scent under proper circumstances and that, once sensed, it is unforgettable. Her claim has made her the sensation of the hour in Washington and it is even whispered that Mrs. Harding is interested.

"On the Run" —WITH— MICHAEL COLLINS

By M. G. MAURY.

For the first time the career of Michael Collins, Commander-in-Chief of the Irish Army in the Field, is told to American readers. This sketch of the great Irish patriot is written from facts given to the Boston American by officials of the Irish Republic. Collins at school and college, his boyhood ambition to free Erin and his first activity in the cause were sketched in the first two installments of the series ended today.

Collins fought in the General Post Office during "Easter Week." After the surrender he was fortunate in escaping court-martial, with its accompanying result—the firing squad or the convict prison—and instead was sent to an internment camp in England with thousands of other Irish Volunteers.

The internees were released at Christmas 1916. Collins was promptly elected executive secretary of the National Aid Association. It was while in this position that his marvelous organizing and executive ability became fully known to the active men and women in the Republican movement throughout Ireland.

This led to the election of Collins as a member of the National Council of Sinn Fein, as well as to an important position in the independent military body then known as the Irish Volunteers.

Here again his gift for organization was manifested, and to him in large measure belongs the credit for the splendid efficiency and excellent discipline of the present Irish Republican army. No one was better entitled to the position of commander-in-chief of the field forces of the Republic than he.

MADE ARMY EFFICIENT.

The English and their propagandists attribute to Collins many qualities with a view to minimizing his ability as a commander and to overshadow the following facts:

The Irish Republican army is organized in much the same manner as the army of any other nation, the officers and men who compose it voluntarily pledged their allegiance to the government of the Irish Republic. They recognize their duty to their country and the necessity for obedience to the commands of their superior officers as do the men of any other regularly constituted army. They have confidence in the ability of their commander-in-chief, and are willing to lay down their lives in carrying out his orders. In these facts lie the power and the authority which Collins wields so well.

NAMED FINANCE MINISTER.

In the general election held December, 1918, when the people of Ireland voted by a majority of 80 per cent for an independent Irish Republic, Collins was elected unopposed to represent his native constituency of South Cork in the Republican Congress, which is known by the Irish title, Dail Eireann. He was subsequently chosen Minister of Finance with a seat in the Irish cabinet—a position for which his banking experience in London fitted him.

NO FAITH IN BRITAIN.

Never once has he been tricked by the pretences of the British government. The following statement shows clearly how little faith he places in the promises of the enemy of his country.

"Throughout all her history Ireland has genuinely desired peace. Her fight has been entirely one of self-defence. England is as always the aggressor. She knows that she can have peace by ceasing that aggression, by leaving our country unmolested. But the peace that she desires is the peace of our unconditional surrender.

PLAYS ENGLISH "PEACE."

"This has been made quite clear recently by the British Premier and his 'Dear Hamar' (Sir Hamar Greenwood, English Chief Secretary for Ireland). They want the unconditional surrender of Ireland in order that they may continue their murder of our men and women and the burning of our homes and property without risk to themselves. That is the peace England wants—the peace of desolation, something like the peace that reigned in Munster three centuries ago when the English auxiliaries of those days left nothing from the 'Blackwater to the sea.'

"ON THE RUN" THREE YEARS.

"England wants peace, but she insists upon surrender. The Irish Republic wants peace, but she will not surrender. We will fight on to victory."

Collins has been "on the run" with a price on his head since the early part of 1918. Just think of it—three long years, and every day on active military service in defiance of the mightiest empire in the world. What a monument to the resourcefulness and courage of the man, and to the devotion, discipline and faithfulness of his men!

Had the English succeeded in capturing him two years or even one year ago his loss to the Irish cause might have been irreparable. Now, however, his friends and well wishers in this country feel that even were the worst to befall him—they are all praying for his continued success in escaping the merciless clutches of his enemies—he has brought the Irish Republican army to such a stage of organization and has developed such a veteran staff of able commandants that the fight will be carried on to final victory no matter what happens.

FOSS TENANTS PROTEST

Mt. Auburn Residents to File Petition on Increase With State Board

Protests against any further rent increases were being circulated today among the tenants of the so-called Foss estate, in the Mt. Auburn section of Watertown.

These protests, it was stated, would be forwarded to the Massachusetts Commission on the Necessaries of Life, and pending a hearing by that body the tenants were asked to ignore the announced increase.

The contention was made that rents have been raised from $25 in 1918, to $50 and $60, with no improvements made on the properties during that period. It was said that frequent protests have been made in the past without effect, and the tenants are now organizing to fight.

HUB TEACHERS IN PENSION PLEA

Want to Be Included in Scope of Proposed Contributory System for City Employes

Teachers and principals of Boston's schools want to be included in the scope of the proposed legislation whereby a contributory pension system is provided for city employes.

Under existing conditions teachers and principals are given a non-contributing pension of $600 a year. The pending legislation provides for a 4 per cent salary contribution and 4 per cent additional from the city.

To gain their point a large assemblage of teachers and principals appealed to the joint legislative committee on [illegible] and social welfare.

YOUNG WOMAN SAYS 'TANLAC IS GRAND

Miss Mabel S. Deschanes Is Now An Ardent Champion of Tanlac, Since She Began Using It A Few Weeks Ago.

MISS MABEL S. DESCHANES, Popular Lewiston, Me., Woman.

Miss Mabel S. Deschanes, a popular and attractive young woman residing at No. 7 Bartlett Street, Lewiston, Me., is now an ardent champion of Tanlac since she began using the medicine a few weeks ago.

"I prize Tanlac above every other medicine, even that which was prescribed for me," said Miss Deschanes in relating her experience recently. "I dislike publicity, but there are so many others who, no doubt, suffer as I did, I feel that I ought to tell them about it.

"I had been a great sufferer from indigestion and had been under the doctor's care for six months without relief. At the time I began taking Tanlac I was on a very rigid diet and at times could not retain food of any kind. Even cold water would cause extreme nausea. I suffered from loss of appetite, severe cramping pains after eating and extreme nervousness. Finally my condition got so bad I simply had to give up and go to bed until I got relief. I was unable to go down town to do my shopping and although I had been under treatment for six months, there seemed to be no relief for me. Honestly, I don't believe I would be alive now if I hadn't gotten Tanlac, for I was suffering terribly and getting worse all the time.

"Finally my sister persuaded me to try Tanlac. I improved from the very first and one bottle did me more good than the six months' treatment. Why, I actually gained four pounds in weight while taking this one bottle. I have now taken four bottles and I feel just like a different person and am eating just anything I want. My food [illegible] seems to agree with me perfectly. I am now able to do my shopping without becoming fatigued in the least and am no longer nervous like I was.

OVERCHARGE ON LIGHT CLAIMED

Watson Declares City Pays for More Than It Receives From Edison Company

Counsellor James A. Watson's charge before the Boston City Council that the Consolidated Gas Company was not supplying the candle power prescribed by contract in many of the city lights, revealed complaints of long standing in official circles that the Edison Electric Illuminating Company was equally guilty of charging for more light than it actually furnished the city.

An order was passed by the council to investigate the gas company supply, but no action has been taken as to tests of the lights furnished by the Edison Company.

Last year $[illegible] of the taxpayers' money was paid to the Edison and Boston Gas Companies for lighting the streets and byways of Boston. Of this amount $[illegible] was paid to the Boston Consolidated Gas Company and $[illegible] to the Edison Company.

The Edison Company's bill for arc lights totalled $[illegible] and incandescent lights, $83,420.72. Proper checking up of the city lights is sorely needed. It is a feature that has been neglected for years.

The Boston Gas Company supplies [illegible] single mantle gas lamps and [illegible] fire alarm open flame lamps in Boston. It charges the city $[illegible] per light a year.

The Edison Company supplies [illegible] series magnetic lamps at $[illegible] per lamp and [illegible] incandescents at $[illegible] per lamp; [illegible] tungsten series at $[illegible] per lamp; [illegible] tungsten multiples at $[illegible] per lamp; [illegible] per lamp per year.

The lighting contracts call for a revision in prices after a fixed period of years. While John A. Sullivan was corporation counsel he fought for and won a reduction in the Edison rates to the city dating back to 1914. He saved the city $[illegible].

After a protracted hearing before the Gas and Electric Light Commission, Corporation Counsel Sullivan succeeded in saving the city $144,780.54 on the arc light bill, with an additional $2,085.51 as interest making $152,342.37 which the Edison Company had to return to the city treasury.

McCORMACK TO SING SUNDAY

Irish Tenor to Give Concert for Erin's Sufferers at Boston Opera House

John McCormack, the great Irish tenor, will be in Boston next Sunday to give a concert in aid of the suffering people of Ireland. Mr. McCormack has donated his services free to help along this worthy cause.

The concert will be given at the Boston Opera House on Huntington avenue, beginning at three o'clock. Mr. McCormack will be assisted by Miss Meagher and Edwin Schneider at the piano. It is hoped that there will be a large gathering of music lovers to hear this wonderful singer. Irish and classic airs will be featured.

Tickets may be purchased at the ticket office in the Little Building and at the Massachusetts Committee for Relief in Ireland at No. 166 Devonshire street, Boston. The prices range from $1 to $3. There are several boxes yet unsold.

This concert is the only one to be given by Mr. McCormack in Boston this season. He had already given two other concerts—one in New York, which netted $72,000 and another in Chicago which brought in [illegible]. It is hoped that Boston will at least reach one-half the amount made on the other concerts.

Just then an apologizing marine officer dashed up and escorted the Secretary into the grounds.

BLACK TREAD IS GOOD IN TIRES

United States Company Uses New Compound to Get Tougher Product

From the beginning of the automobile tire industry the treads of tires were made of compounds which when vulcanized gave a white or light gray color.

This type of compound was in common use throughout the industry up to about the years 1911 or 1912, when a new compounding ingredient, jet black in color, appeared on the market.

This new ingredient was first used in very small quantities in making up the rubber compound, and merely for the purpose of producing a dark gray or black color and with no thought of affecting the durability or wearing qualities of the tread.

"In our experiments," says a bulletin of the United States Tire Company, "we found that by using this ingredient in fairly large percentages a new type of tread compound could be produced which was approximately twice as resistant to abrasion and cutting as the old conventional tread compound."

Brockton Man Drops Dead

Brockton, May 18.—William J. Keating, sixty-two years old, of No. 88 East Union street, dropped dead from heart failure at his bench in the Howard A. Foster shoe factory.

Don't Laugh at this. It's True!

No! The lady is not stirring the soup. She is boiling her mop to make it sweet and sanitary. It is one of those mops tied to a handle—invented by someone in the lumber business. A new mop of this kind always means a new handle. Yes, you always pay for the handle.

You can tell the lady hasn't heard of the MASCO Mop—yet. Otherwise she wouldn't be bothered with this "deck mop."

When she buys a MASCO she will buy only the mop head. She will think someone has slipped her a horse shoe—for luck.

The MASCO is made of a new quality of extra, double absorbent cotton yarn. It laps up water like Rover after he has been chasing cats. It wrings out as easily as it soaks up.

Once over with a MASCO equals twice over with any other mop. Only half the usual work—see?

Unlike the "deck mop" the MASCO is easy to boil clean. Moreover, it dries dry all the way through.

All stores where mops are sold carry the MASCO. If you don't see it ask for it—by name. Each MASCO is done up in a separate trade marked wrapper. This is for your protection—so you can identify it and always get MASCO quality.

There are big MASCO Mops—for janitor's use.

For the 8 oz. you will be asked 45c, 60c for the 12 oz. and 75c for the 16 oz.

For sale by grocers, housefurnishing and hardware dealers and department stores.

News of Motion Picture World

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

SEVERAL weeks ago I spoke in this column of the possibilities of using the Benda masks in the movies as symbols. This was when they were arousing widespread interest as used by Margaret Severn, the interpretative dancer, in the Greenwich Village Follies.

Though I had a few scoffers then, I stuck to my theory that the masks could and should find a place in films, not for endless scenes in every picture, but now and then as a particularly subtle reminder of what things really mean.

Now we see this idea carried out most effectively by D. W. Griffith in "Dream Street." A mask is worn by the Trickster of the Streets, the fiddler with the beautiful mask, who brings out the evil in those about him and urges them to violence. His mask, with peaceful, beautiful, contrasts strangely with the hideous, sinful face behind it.

This mask, too, was made by W. T. Benda, the illustrator, who took up the art as a hobby and has developed it as a paying profession. The making of one mask requires from two to five weeks of almost constant work. Thousands of slips of paper, about the size of a nickel, are sealed together by a secret process.

A NEW "FIND."

NOT ALL movie players are developed from "extras" or [illegible] from the speaking stage. Here comes Ethel Dare to prove that what she learned in a New York dramatic school stands her in good stead under the Klieg lights.

Miss Dare graduated from a stage school a short time ago and was immediately snatched up by Cosmopolitan to play a role in the new Fannie Hurst story, "Back Pay," which is being directed by Frank Borzage. The film management watches the dramatic school results carefully with a view to "discovering" not merely good looks, but talent. She has been given a prominent and powerful part in "Back Pay."

ET TU, BALZAC.

NOT ONLY is William Shakespeare coming to the fore as a writer of screenable stories, but old, or fairly old, masters are being considered very favorably.

When Louis B. Mayer made the discovery that "King Lear" was not only a good stage vehicle but would make modern scenarists sit up in amazement, other producers hunted up the nearest libraries and delved in the volumes of famous novels.

The newest author to be filmed is Balzac. Already Robertson-Cole is rehearsing a special production of one of his stories, title withheld, but Metro is planning a big feature to out-shine "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." Rex Ingram will direct this one, too, and Alice Terry and Rudolph Valentino will play the leading roles. June Mathis adapted the continuity.

CAMERA CLICKS.

MONTE BLUE is out of the hospital after an operation for appendicitis and will shortly continue his work on the Lasky lot. His last picture was the Realart film version of "Moonlight and Honeysuckle," featuring Mary Miles Minter. Blue made the role of the cowboy here.

GLORIA SWANSON is enjoying a week's vacation after finishing her first starring picture "The Great Moment," written by Elinor Glyn.

LOIS WEBER has engaged [illegible] Hicks to [illegible] in her next picture. He is a veteran of the [illegible] stage, having appeared with Otis Skinner and Wilton Lackaye, and has appeared in "Intolerance," [illegible] and [illegible]. Others in the [illegible] cast are [illegible] Walcamp, [illegible] and Louis Calhern.

THOMAS H. INCE has [illegible] "The Cup of Life" [illegible] out and edited for release. The cast includes Hobart Bosworth, Madge Bellamy, [illegible] and Niles Welch. The story is a [illegible] romance of the East Indies.

"SHOULD A MAN MARRY?" is the next Paramount comedy on which "Fatty" Arbuckle has begun work. Sarah Y. Mason wrote the story.

JACK HOLT, Lila Lee and Theodore Kosloff have been engaged for important roles in William DeMille's next production, taken from a Rita Weiman story.

CLAIMS ALIBI IN FLIER'S DEATH

Brunette Friend of MacGilvray Says She Had Not Seen Him Since 1919

"I was out with Palen MacGilvray the night before his body was found. I can account for my whereabouts that night. I was not intimate with him."

A handsome brunette who admitted she was a friend of the dead flier and who may be questioned by the police in the investigation of his death, made the above statement to the Boston American today.

It is understood the police have been trying to find her for several days because of a report that she was unusually friendly with MacGilvray some months ago.

Today she denies seeing MacGilvray since 1919. She declared that the night before his body was found in an alley off Hancock street she had visited a friend near her apartment and returned home a little after 10 o'clock. She said she had a headache and retired at 10:30.

"I was at my place of employment the following day," she said. "I was not intimate with MacGilvray. It is true I saw him frequently. He was a good fellow. I do not know the married woman whose name has been mentioned in the case."

The police are said to be anxious to question the young woman because of reports that shortly before MacGilvray's body was found a woman was seen fleeing from the alley.

UNION BUILDERS REPORT DENIED

5,000 Striking Mechanics Have Not Returned to Work, Says Council Official

Editor Boston American:

In an afternoon edition of the Boston American the inference is made that I, as secretary of the United Building Trades Council, admitted that 5000 building trades mechanics had returned to work.

This inference is untrue, unfair and misleading, as I never made that statement.

What I did say was:

"It is true that some men employed as carpenters and metal workers have gone back to work as individuals and not as members of the union.

"The strike has not been called off, and is developing into a stiff open shop fight."

I ask for a correction and justice in the matter, in justice to the men that I have the honor of representing, and who have made the gallant fight that they have made in this past seventeen weeks against a reduction in a living wage, and who are still striving to maintain the standard of living they are entitled to.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. Forbes

One of the most successful business men in America was recently asked by a youngish man, who had recently started his own company, for some helpful pointers. After listening to an outline of the youngish man's affairs, the veteran recommended that he do a certain thing.

"But I couldn't afford such an expenditure," objected the youngish man.

Then the veteran gave him this morsel of business wisdom:

"Don't count only the cost. Figure what it will bring in return. No outlay is costly which more than pays for itself."

The advice was taken, and the young business is now thriving.

* * *

We have heard more than enough about bad times during the last nine months. The majority of business men lost their courage completely when the war bubble burst. They turned their whole attention to cutting down expenditures and expenses, to curtailing operations and to pulling in their horns in every direction. They acted wholly negatively.

* * *

Now, retrenchment was wise and inevitable in a great many cases. In no other way could lots of concerns have pulled through.

Yet instances are daily coming to light where an aggressive, constructive policy has paid handsomely. While instituting every rational economy many companies and firms resolved to redouble their effort, redouble their enterprise, redouble their enthusiasm and even redouble their business-getting expenditures. The results achieved often have exceeded all expectation.

* * *

When the relapse came most automobile companies, for illustration, cancelled their advertising contracts, dropped salesmen, dismissed men by the hundred or thousand and ceased to go after business with whole-hearted zest. A few automobile companies instead of shutting off selling and advertising steam went ahead at full blast. Here's what happened in one case, as authoritatively described:

"The Haynes Automobile Company actually took in in dollars and cents during the month of March more money than they did in March, 1920, and they sold more cars. They attribute their success this year to the fact that they are making a first-class car and advertising it at the right price. Their representatives are on the job and working eight, ten, twelve and fifteen hours a day selling cars. They have advertised continually during the past twenty-eight years and even during the past year they did not cancel any advertising, but kept their campaign going in newspapers, magazines and farm papers throughout the year as they are doing up to date this year and plan to do the balance of the year."

The Literary Digest recorded in a whole page advertisement the other day, that it had gone ahead at full steam during the period of widespread depression and that the results of its vigorous policy and increased expenditures had been satisfactory beyond all expectations. The Cosmopolitan Magazine has had a similar experience. So have the Hearst Sunday newspapers. So have other publishing companies that did not lose courage or relax effort.

* * *

One capably managed company, manufacturing textile machinery, has been working twenty-four hours a day. Several silk manufacturers who promptly cut prices have for months had more orders than they could fill. So have one or two hosiery plants. Quite a number of progressive specialty manufacturers very promptly triumphed over the sharp setback received last year and have since been running full time. One large concern manufacturing beds, instead of cutting down its advertising and its selling force, gingered up both, and has earned far better profits than have come to those companies who turned tail and ran.

Schwab announced a few days ago that he was going ahead with the expenditure of many millions of dollars at one of his shipping plants, notwithstanding the drastic slump in the shipbuilding industry. As a matter of fact, Schwab's policy always has been to build additional plants as energetically in bad times as in busy times, when materials are dearer and efficient labor scarcer.

* * *

One of the best managed railroads during the last fifteen years has been the Union Pacific. Harriman raised it from a decrepit, bankruptcy property to a first-class railroad, and his successors have also followed a forward-looking policy. Announcement has just been made that the company is to construct a new forty-mile railroad—not much, it is true, yet quite an ambitious railroad building project measured by the extent of railroad building during recent years.

* * *

I venture to predict that many companies who will make the best showing during the next twelve or eighteen months will be those who have not allowed themselves to be overawed by the recent relapse in business and the drastic fall in prices, but who are at this moment making contracts for large amounts of low-priced raw materials and putting forth all possible efforts to develop new business. It may seem hazardous to enter into avoidable obligations at a time like this, but it may well prove wise to act on the advice given the business novitiate by the veteran quoted at the beginning of this column.

RAILS ADVANCE ON WAGE CUT

Steels, Motors and Oils Are Lower; Industrials Soon Take Downward Course

By W. H. Ross,
Financial Editor

Stocks were irregular in New York at noon, but the market would have been weak but for rails. They were below their highest at the end of the morning. Steels, oils, motors and most other industrials eased off in the second hour when there was a [illegible] reaction. Trading was more active than yesterday, first hour transactions aggregating not far from 320,000 shares. Call money started at 7 per cent. Foreign exchange was stronger, sterling and francs opening higher.

Bosch Magneto sold at a new low for the year and U. S. Realty sold at its 1921 highest.

MOVED UPWARD AT ONCE

An upturn marked the market at the opening, about everything on the list selling higher. But rails were the leaders, advancing from fractions to about two points on initial transactions or soon afterwards. The announcement that the Labor Board would authorize a reduction of the unskilled labor wage accounted for the strength of the carriers. Pere Marquette sold at a new high for the year. Aside from carriers similar improvement was made by Inspiration and Hide and Leather common and preferred. Within a few minutes realization selling caused a reactionary movement which was most apparent in oils, steels, motors and equipments. Losses of from one to more than two points were common among industrials. Carriers failed to hold all their gains. Trading was very brisk at the start but slackened on the decline of prices. Tobaccos, leathers and coppers went up at the outset, but some of the latter eased off quickly. At the end of an hour the market was irregular.

HIGH MONEY RATE

Despite the relaxation of credit tension and lower discount rates, the call rate is firmer than for some time. There is not much outside money [illegible] in New York for some time [illegible]. Government [illegible] and withdrawals [illegible] to be reflected in the call rate for a few days longer. Another factor has been the transactions incidental to the floating of the largest railway bond issue on record. Oil stocks were affected this morning by a further reduction of the [illegible] price. [illegible] hard [illegible] earth instead of being smashed by a fall from the sky.

Federal Reserve Bank Report

For the year 1920 the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston reports a total income of $12,341,120, as compared with $7,197,582 in 1919 and net earnings of $10,272,864, against $5,777,281 in 1919. Earnings for last year were equivalent to $123.09 per share on the $7,718,000 stock, and $42.84 per share on the combined capital and surplus. After the payment of dividends and the reserve for franchise tax, the balance carried to surplus was $7,351,799, against $6,823,434 in 1919.

Steel Rails for Japan

The foreign demand for steel rails is increasing, Japan having ordered 6,000 tons from the U. S. Steel Products Company, which also has received inquiries from Argentina for 10,000 tons, and from China 15,000 tons.

Wall Street Briefs

The Magnolia Petroleum Company will dispose of its unissued capital stock to shareholders at the par value of $100, which will bring outstanding stock up to $120,000,000.

White, Weld & Co. are offering an issue of $1,436,000 6½ per cent. Equipment Trust Gold Certificates of the Chicago & North Western Railway Company to yield 6.50 to 6.35 per cent.

Accountants representing the Evans stockholders' committee have been examining books of the American Smelting & Refining Company for a fortnight.

Bell Telephone Company of Canada will increase its capital stock from $22,900,000 to $28,625,000, or by $5,725,000.

Reports from agricultural districts indicate that fertilizer consumption this year will be about 50 per cent. of normal. The demand from the South will not much exceed 25 per cent. of the usual amount.

Sales of the Kresge Company increased $1,010,000 in the first four months of this year, while the gain by Woolworth stores aggregated $2,000,000.

Wool holdings in this country are estimated to be 751,000,000 pounds by the government, 312,088,000 by dealers and 172,794,000 by manufacturers.

Corporation Reports

For 1920 the Atlantic Coast Line reports net corporation income after taxes and charges of $7,084,[illegible], against $7,187,537 in 1919.

Ingersoll-Rand Company surplus for last year amounts to $3,885,928, equal after preferred dividends to $35.26 a share on common, against $5,016,907 or $44.63 in 1919.

Eastman Kodak profits for 1920 were the largest in the company's history, amounting to $18,596,210. It added $10,330,128 to its surplus after distributing $8,295,782 in dividends.

California Petroleum's surplus for the first quarter of this year amounted to $567,751, bringing the surplus total up to $1,542,100. Its net earnings for the three months amounted to $1,180,[illegible].

Railroad Items

Atchison car loadings decreased 402 cars during the May 25 week, compared with the like 1920 period, aggregating 25,044 against 29,0[illegible].

During the seven months ended with March, Texas & Pacific's maintenance charges were 57.9 per cent. of its gross revenues.

WALDORF HELD LOCAL LEAD

Boston Market Has Firm Start and Prices Are Higher on the Curb

Prices were higher on the Boston exchange when trading began, and they remained up during the forenoon, although some issues eased off from their highest. Waldorf continued to be the feature, being the most active issue and selling at a new 1921 high. Earnings by this corporation and dividend expectations account for the attention it has commanded of late. Rails as a rule made small gains on a few transactions. Maine Central was an exception, receding a point. Amoskeag and Calumet & Hecla declined a point or more. Pacific Mills advanced five points on its first sale for this week. Other strong issues were U. S. Smelting and Mohawk. Both gained a point, but the last named soon lost most of its advance. The market was moderately active. American Telephone rights [illegible].

Among issues to make fractional gains were Boston Elevated, Boston & Maine, New Haven, Copper Range, St. Mary's Land, Davis Daly, North Butte, Mayflower, New England Telephone, Gardner Motor and Waldorf. Small losses were shown by Swift & Co., Swift International, Carson Hill, National Leather and United Fruit.

CURB OPENED STRONG

The Curb market was strong at the opening and remained fairly firm during the forenoon, although all gains were not retained. Trading was quiet. Early leaders were Boston and Montana and Eureka. Among stocks to advance at once were Alpha, Allied Oil, Arizona Silver, Bagdad, Boston and Montana, Palisade, Ruby, Royalty and Production. Issues to decline at once included Empire Food and South American Gold.

At the end of an hour Boston and Montana was up 1 cent at 81 cents and Kingdon [illegible]. Among declines were [illegible] at 11 [illegible], Boston Ely 1 cent at 18 cents, Crystal 1 cent at 38 cents, [illegible].

Cotton Market Opening

New York, May 18.—At the opening of the cotton market business was slow today, but outside of a decline of 5 points in May first prices were unchanged to 2 points higher than last night's close. The only early feature was a little Southern wire house selling and Wall street buying. Japanese interests purchased July and sold the new crop options. Liverpool did not appear to be trading either way and reported a dull market at home. After the start here the list advanced about 10 points over last night's close on new crop options. This was due to expectations of a bullish weekly weather bulletin from Washington at midday. Opening prices were: May, 12.50; July, 12.90; September, 13.45; October, 13.65; December, 14.00; January, 14.13 offered; March, 14.40.

Chicago Grain Market

Chicago, May 18.—Wheat opened ¼ to 1¼c lower. Corn was ¼ to ⅜c lower. Oats were unchanged to ⅛c lower and provisions unchanged. Opening prices were: Wheat 1.45½ to 1.46; July 1.15 to 1.15½. VANDERLIP GETS BIG PULP GRANT

Soviet Concession for 10,000,000 Acres of Spruce Frees U. S. From British Trust

Berlin, May 18.—A wireless dispatch from Washington D. Vanderlip, who is in Moscow, declares that he has completed a contract for ten million acres of spruce timber in the Archangel region. Among the advantages claimed by Vanderlip and which make the concession valuable are "deep water harbor, free labor and an absence of soviet control."

According to Vanderlip the attitude of Secretary of State Hughes precludes the sanctioning of concessions by the soviet government, but he states that the Soviets give assurance of granting concessions when relations are resumed. Vanderlip's message says:

"This immense tract will furnish Eastern paper mills with [illegible]. [illegible] thousand tons of pulp annually. American steamers, [illegible] American goods for the Russian [illegible] railways and [illegible].

"It will release American [illegible] from the [illegible] of the British-Canadian Northcliffe pulp trust."

How to Carry
SECURITIES ON ACCOUNT

The carrying of Stocks and Bonds on Account is based on the same business principles that apply in financing the purchase of real estate and in negotiating other business deals where the full capital requirements are not available at the moment.

We are issuing a booklet which explains in a simple way what a broker does when you order him to buy securities to be carried on account—how the necessary "loan" is handled—how the broker as well as the client is protected—what the client's obligations are and why the broker must require him to meet them.

Also explaining the advantages and disadvantages of the different methods in thus operating a permanent investment—and how a "carried" account can be used as either an investment or trading account—or both at the same time.

If you are interested in the Market send for this Booklet, "B-2"

AN ANGEL ON THE LINKS

[illegible]

Although he was confined in life's efforts to a single opponent, C. J. Carpenter, captain of the Princeton wrestling team, who recently stayed the limit of twenty minutes with Strangler Lewis, will follow the latter's advice and devote his time to wrestling. Carpenter will enter the ministry and spend the remainder of his days wrestling with the well known Mr. Satan.

* * *

* * *

Carpentier's appearance on his arrival, while pleasing to boxing enthusiasts, made anything but a favorable impression with us smart dressers. Can you imagine a guy with eighty trunks full of clothes appearing with a blue serge suit and a plain white starched collar? Carp did much better by us on his former visit.

Since Dr. Lasker returned to Germany [illegible] $17,000 [illegible] playing a dozen games of [illegible] Capablanca [illegible] planning [illegible] next tournament at Ha[illegible] can hardly blame [illegible] shove the little figures [illegible] at $1,000 a shove?

Jack Curley has tentatively booked Georges Carpentier for a tour of this country, figuring that if Georges wins from Dempsey, he can get Jack [illegible]

Those Cubs lead the Braves slightly now, but things are likely to be different in a fortnight, which in baseball means a couple of weeks. The Braves have more stuff than the John Evers outfit, especially with Alex and Vaughn not so good.

* * *

[illegible]

Johnny Evers lost more than the ball games. We hear that he was fined for an altercation with one of the umpires. The visit didn't remind John of old times at all.

The average title packer loves an American girl for all she's worth, and she usually loves him for the same reason.

CHAMPION SAYS THEY RETARD HIS WORKOUTS

By JACK DEMPSEY.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 18.—Some different rules will govern my training routine and camp conduct for this fight with Georges Carpentier.

Jack Kearns has decided against too much fraternalism with outsiders while I am engaged in the business of fitting myself to successfully defend my championship. Experience in Toledo, Benton Harbor and New York has determined Jack and I have too many friends in my training camp days for my best good.

The camp which I now have is fenced in completely. Admission is through a gate only. That gate will be guarded as soon as I begin the training work. No one will be able to gain admission through that gate except through a special pass which Jack will issue, unless, of course, it is during the hour when I am to work out publicly.

To Be Interviewed Twice Daily

Jack will probably fix two periods daily when I can have a pow-wow with the newspaper boys. I'll be looking forward to that. Great gang, those reporters and we always have a lot of fun when they come tromping in. For as I'm concerned I'd see 'em any and all hours in the day. But Jack's the boss and what he says about the training camp will have to go.

The "early to bed" idea is a great one. Just now I'm hitting the feathers every night at 10 and getting up around 6:30 or 7. When I start rigorous training I'll be in bed at 9 or sooner and up at 6. And nobody'll have to punch an alarm clock to get me up at 6. I've been an early riser ever since I was a kid and it makes no difference what time I turn in I'm sure to wake up at 6.

Meanwhile, I'm sort of champion at the bit. I'm keen to get right down to the conditioning business right this minute. But it's a little too soon to begin swatting the boys every day and working out for about four hours one way or another. But I'll be glad when Jack Kearns gives me the O. K. and I can cut loose.

TAD DISCOVERS CARPENTIER

Finds Frenchman in Camp Cut Off From World by Barbed Wire

per collar on, having rushed down from his room.

Captain Mallet, who is interpreter-in-chief, strolled up at that moment and explained to the cameramen that no moving pictures whatever are allowed to be taken at the camp.

"Mr. Rickard has a contract with some picture people and they alone will take pictures in this camp," he said.

"Dempsey's were taken? Ah, yes, but that was at Summit, N. J. They were not taken at Dempsey's official camp. Mr. Rickard will not allow one foot of film to be taken of either man in his official camp."

CROWDS BOTHER CARPENTIER.

Captain Mallet then explained to the boys that the joint was very private and that if they'd step out on the road everybody would feel easier. Descamps, with his new pill half smoked, told Mallett something and then the captain said that the crowds bothered the champion and that none but newspaper people were to be allowed inside the fence.

Mr. Descamps has ordered five new carloads of barbed wire and intends fencing in the whole estate. The writer wouldn't be surprised to see the whole of Long Island roped in with barbed wire before Descamps is finished.

The Hempstead turnpike, which is the main road from New York and which runs along in front of the house was simply packed with autos, horses and wagons, bicycles and motor cycles in the vicinity of the camp. Every delivery wagon in Nassau County seemed to be parked there. One farmer had his cow tied behind a flivver. When the bloke who owned the flivver got ready to go he had to wait until he found the bloke who owned the Holstein.

The gang around Manhasset haven't had so much excitement since the day some bloke poured a bottle of red ink into the water trough by the station and all the horses in town had red noses.

COUNTRYWIDE KILLING ON CHO CHO'S VICTORY

Louisville, Ky., May 18.—It was an ideal day for racing at Churchill Downs, but the talent had another bad session with the mutuel machines, only one favorite winning. The surprise of the day was the result of the first race. Cho Cho, a three-year-old filly belonging to F. F. Courson, who had never started before, was quietly played all over the country and won with ease, $2 mutuel tickets paying $19. It was a regular old-time killing.

BROOKS RESIGNS AS GOLF PRESIDENT

Chicago, May 18.—Wilbur H. Brooks of the Mayfield Country Club, Cleveland, has resigned as President of the Western Golf Association at a special meeting of the directors, who elected Albert R. Gates of the Calumet Club, Chicago, president; and Charles O. Pfeil of Memphis, a director, vice-president, to take the place of Mr. Gates.

Mr. Brooks, who was serving his second term, explained that personal business compelled him not only to resign, but to give up his membership in the United States Golf Association.

Many Low Handicap Players in Country Club Golf Tournament Tomorrow

By ROBERT E. HARLOW.

More than two hundred low handicap golfers struggling for the sixteen places in the match play division of the Country Club cup tournament tomorrow will furnish the first real keen competition for amateurs held in Massachusetts this year. A fine first division should be combed out of the starters.

A number of golfers who are on the inside handicap schedule of the State Association, that is players at five strokes or under are entered for the Country Club meeting and it will be interesting to read the returns. Up to the present these low handicap men have not appeared in numbers in open competition and it has been impossible to get much of a line on their play.

* * *

A. S. Brown, Jr., one of Salem's most enthusiastic golfers, acted as host today to a number of Boston newspaper men. He wished them to see the Salem course, where an open tournament of the State Association is to be held on Friday and Saturday. Mr. Brown plays in many of the open tournaments of the association and hopes for a large turnout at his home course.

Criticism on the manner of handicapping at the amateur-professional meet at Woodland has caused the committee of the New England Professional Golfers' Association to change, and when the next event of the sort is held, handicaps will not be allowed at holes, but will be subtracted from the gross cards returned. This is a better way, as it assures all starters of their just handicap. As scored at Woodland, some players took advantage of all their strokes, while others who did not have lucky breaks, were able to use but 50 per cent.

The international team match, United States vs. Great Britain, will be played at Hoylake Saturday. Eight players will compose each team and three of the Americans will be Boston golfers. The American team: Francis Ouimet, Jesse Guilford, Fred Wright, Jr., Chick Evans, Bobby Jones, J. W. Platt, Dr. Hunter and Bill Fownes, captain.

Wollaston is leading the Boston Four-ball League with twenty-five points. Other scores: Albemarle and Woodland, 18½; Chestnut Hill and Commonwealth, 18; Winchester, 16; Weston, 15, and Oakley 12½.

WAR VETERANS EXTEND WELCOME TO DEMPSEY

Atlantic City, May 18.—Jack Dempsey was the recipient of a pleasing surprise when he was handed a communication from the J. Willis Gale Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars extending a hearty welcome to him and expressing the hope that his stay in this city would be beneficial and pleasant. They also declared Dempsey was an asset in more ways than one.

Showing that the veterans were impartial, they sent a similar message to Georges Carpentier at his Manhasset quarters.

HARVARD STROKE IS SHIFTED TO STARBOARD

Harvard's stroke for the next few days at least will be directed from the starboard. This will give Larrie Terry more satisfaction as he has been transferred from seven to stroke, and the change to port was not much to his liking. Most college crews place their stroke on starboard, but the Harvard custom has been to use the port side. The shift, according to Coach Haines, is only an experiment. It is expected to be maintained against Tech Saturday.

CARPENTIER'S BRAIN

Can It Overcome Dempsey's Punch? War Heroes, Speculators and Golf.

By JACK CONWAY

Georges Carpentier, heavyweight champion of Europe, says he will win the world's title from Jack Dempsey despite the fact he only weighs 175 pounds. The great Frenchman believes that his BRAIN POWER will more than offset Dempsey's PUNCHING POWER. Look at one of Carpentier's pictures and you will see a slim, boyish figure with a highly intelligent face. BRAIN POWER is the greatest asset for a boxer when it is backed by PHYSICAL STRENGTH. Lloyd George is considered by many persons as Europe's most intellectual statesman. The great Welshmen, however, would not be able to stand up before Dempsey or Carpentier for ten seconds if either of these gentlemen should care to knock him down.

Stonewall Jackson has turned over $62.50 more to this writer for the fund with which to purchase athletic equipment for the wounded soldiers stationed at hospitals in Greater Boston. This makes the total of the fund close to $500. The latest contribution to the fund was secured at a collection taken up in the Broadway Theatre, South Boston, through the courtesy of the owner, James Powers. If some of the learned orators in Congress took as much interest in our war heroes as the baseball fans of Greater Boston, there would not be any need for a fund such as the one started by this newspaper.

Hugh Duffy's Red Sox are smashing their way through the opposition in the American League at a surprising rate of speed. The showing of the Boston club this year is awakening memories of the days when the Red Sox were always in the thick of the pennant fight. The brilliant playing by the Red Sox infield has been largely responsible for the success of the team. May the Sox not slow down as the flag fight becomes more intense and double-headers are played as a part of each afternoon's program.

A speculator, desiring to purchase $2,500 worth of tickets for the Herman-Montreal bout, was shown the way out of the office of the Faneuil A. C. Before leaving he was informed that it is a violation of law for a boxing club to sell blocks of tickets to speculators and also that one of the reasons why the Faneuil Club has been so successful in staging big shows was because it always gave the public an opportunity to purchase the choice seats without any added charge from a get-rich-quick, unscrupulous ticket speculator. Other boxing clubs would do well to take a page out of the Faneuil Club's book.

Golf is given as one of the reasons for the decrease in attendance at ball games. Very likely. American business men are finally beginning to realize that they can prevent premature old age and assure themselves good health by being ACTIVE COMPETITORS in some form of athletics. Men who get their athletic recreation WATCHING OTHER PEOPLE COMPETE are not very liable to celebrate their sixtieth birthday outside of the spirit world.

AMHERST LEADS IN UNIQUE TRACK MEET

Middletown, Ct., May 18.—Amherst won five events out of seven in the telephone track meet with Wesleyan. The unique athletic contest will be concluded today, with seven more events. Ten men are entered in most of the events by each college, and the main purpose was announced as a broad development of track work for a large number of students. The total times or distances were added together to decide the winner of each event.

Lowell, May 18.—Colby won over Lowell Textile, 6 to 5. Textile made a rally in the ninth and might have at least tied the score but for poor base running.

MILLER AND PFEFFER OUT OF GAME THROUGH HURTS

New York, May 18.—The hospital list of the Brooklyn Dodgers has been increased by the addition of Otto Miller. Miller's feet slipped from under him as he was chasing a foul ball on Sunday and he sat down violently. It was learned today that the end of Miller's spine had been bruised. It may be a long time before he is in shape to play again.

Ed Pfeffer, Brooklyn's big right-handed pitcher, was operated on for a sort of carbuncle on the leg near the ankle resulting from an infected bruise. The operation and removal of pus left a big hole in his leg and he will be out of the game for an indefinite period.

The Union Boat Club eight-oared crew defeated the Tech varsity oarsmen by four lengths in a one and one-half-mile race on the Charles River. The winning shell was timed in 8m. 50s., rather slow time for the conditions under which the race was rowed.

RUTH STIRS UP THE CLERGY

Worcester Ministers Think Babe's Value Is Being Overestimated by Sporting World

Worcester, May 18.—Worcester clergymen are in the midst of a fanning bee of which Babe Ruth, home run specialist, is a storm centre.

The Rev. Lyman V. Farnsworth, pastor of the Lake View Congregational Church, thinks that American citizens are sick of reading about Babe and his four-ply smashes and says that aside from his war club, the Babe has little claim on the admiration of fandom.

A Queen for Nine Days

THE shortest reign of an English monarch was that of Lady Jane Grey, in 1553. She was queen for nine days, and then she was beheaded, and Mary I., the daughter of Henry VIII., came to the throne.

Husband's Battle to Keep Love of Fascinating But Fickle Wife Depicted in Dramatic Episodes

"DID IT. I suppose I am, if you [illegible] say. But I didn't know anything about the new law. And besides, what difference does it make if I've got to sue on grounds that don't exist anyway?"

"What grounds [illegible] you advised?"

Diana answered [illegible] with [illegible] in her voice.

"[illegible] sort of things," she said [illegible].

"[illegible] and that sort of thing," repeated Manners. [illegible] to see if he [illegible] two tickets or only one [illegible] in the train. He [illegible] the [illegible]. It would not be possible to [illegible] stronger [illegible] love [illegible].

She was [illegible] her [illegible] to go before a judge and [illegible] that he—he, Francis Manners—had been cruel to her, and that sort of thing!

"Oh, Diana!"

The next day Diana went to town by an early train. She seemed to take it for granted that her goings and comings were no longer to be questioned. She did not say where she was going, or what she was going to do, or by what train she would return to the country.

"I have stopped asking questions," said Mrs. Langham. "She knows that I know what is in the air, but she hasn't said a word to me about it and I haven't said a word to her. Indeed, we don't see much of her out here."

"I suppose not," said Manners, and he added grimly: "They have arranged everything. Maine is the chosen State. I am to be divorced for cruelty and that sort of thing." Then he laughed and added: "I haven't told her," he said, "that I am not to be divorced at all. I shall tell her tonight or tomorrow.

Nerves in Shape

"My nerves are in good shape and I shall manage to keep my temper. If I had only myself to consider I'd let her go. But every day I have felt more and more strongly that the only person to consider is Tam."

Late that afternoon Diana telephoned that she was dining at the apartment, and she added with unnecessary bravado, Manners thought, that Teah was to dine with her. "But we are having an early dinner," she added, "and I'll be home before 10."

Except to himself Manners [illegible] no comment. Diana's voice over the telephone [illegible] of one whose [illegible]. He made [illegible] himself, [illegible] I wonder [illegible] this [illegible].

[illegible] an ultimatum."

In dealing with Diana he would need strength and [illegible] and the [illegible] reassurance that the [illegible] was his. He was going to [illegible] Diana tonight. From time to time he looked at his watch. If the train was not late Diana should reach the house at about a quarter before ten.

Mrs. Langham always seemed to have an instinctive knowledge of time. At half-past nine she closed her book and [illegible] an [illegible] yawn. Then she rose and stood for a few moments with her back to the fire. "I shan't sit up for Diana," she said. "Shall you tell her tonight?"

A Comforting Word

"I'd better tell her tonight," he said. "I don't think that I could possibly sleep on the 'cruelty and that sort of thing.'"

"Frank," said Mrs. Langham, "there's a hard time ahead for you—for all of us. Don't let anything that Diana says or does hurt your love for her. Your whole future, yours and hers, is founded on that. She has treated you so outrageously that sometimes I am afraid that your love may change suddenly into something else."

"I couldn't ever stop loving Diana," said Manners simply, "but my love has become so snubbed, abused and brow-beaten that it has become inarticulate. Sometimes it seems to me that it is buried under contempt. But it's always there, always ready to jump to its feet, and to forgive. Don't be afraid."

She turned and went slowly up the stairs. From the landing she smiled to him and waved her hand.

He opened the front door and stood in the cold night air listening for the sounds of wheels on the gravel. He looked at his watch. A quarter before ten. If she found a motor at the station she should be here now, but if there was nothing to lift her home but a broken-down hack horse he must have patience. And then of course that particular train stopped at every station and was almost always late.

Manners was not the only listener in the house. Upstairs at a window which she had opened Mrs. Langham was also listening. She had developed with relation to her son-in-law a peculiar intuitive sympathy by which she was sometimes enabled to penetrate his varying moods, and even to follow for a time his train of thought. And she knew that tonight his mood was dangerous. He did not know this himself. He imagined that his nerves and mind were under perfect control.

Mrs. Langham heard the sound of the front door closing. [illegible]

"[illegible] late," she said.

"I know [illegible]."

He [illegible]. Nor did she. But she heard [illegible]. He was pacing the [illegible] the library with long, nervous strides, and, [illegible] the telephone, asked [illegible] the correct time and [illegible] it. Then he resumed [illegible].

Then he once more opened the front door and [illegible]. The cold night air [illegible] into the house and up the stairs. Mrs. Langham could feel it [illegible]. He closed the door presently and once more attempted to derive an explanation of Diana's lateness from the telephone. He tried to get into connection with the station-master at Westbury, but without success.

A Restless Man

He was no longer impatient with Diana for being late; he was growing anxious for her safety. He thought of trains which roll over embankments, of head-on collisions, of passenger coaches that crumple up like accordions, of railroad fires in which women and children are burned to death.

He gave the number of the apartment to the telephone operator, but she told him after a long delay, during which he lost his temper and asked to be connected with the manager, that the number did not answer.

Mrs. Langham had withdrawn into her room, but she had not closed the door. She heard the sound of Manners' feet on the stair. When he was half-way up he perceived that her door was open, and, raising his voice a trifle:

"Do you think anything could have happened?" he asked.

Mrs. Langham came out of her room and, resting one hand on the guardrail, smiled down at him.

"No," she said with a cheerful crispness that brought an answering smile to his face, "I don't think anything can have happened."

"If she'd missed the train," he said, "she would have telephoned. I'm afraid something may have happened to the train."

Mrs. Langham shook her head. "Nothing ever does happen to that particular train," she said. "Lots of people wish that something would happen to it. It's a disreputable sluggard, and it has trouble with its wheels."

"How do you mean?"

"Why, sometimes," she said, "usually even—they don't go round fast enough."

He Has to Laugh

She had succeeded in making him laugh. He wished her good-night again and, turning, descended the stairs. "What a brick she is," he thought. "She's just as much worried as I am, but she's too well bred to show it."

And in fact Mrs. Langham's worry was as great as his own. But she was not in the least worried about the train or the safety of Diana's person. She was worried about Manners. It [illegible] for a wife to be [illegible] with her wronged husband. And most surely Diana had been so exceedingly [illegible]. That she was [illegible] not her fault, but it was a [illegible] one would [illegible].

When Manners told her that he had been worried to death about her, she would [illegible] tell him that he ought not to be so childish. Neither of them would be in a mood to [illegible] the ultimatum [illegible] Manners had determined to deliver that night.

Once more [illegible] opened her window and listened intently. This time she heard the rattling and gasping of a motor car that might well have been one of the station cars, but it did not turn in at the gate. Manners had also opened the front door to listen to the passing of the noisy, bolt-worn machine.

He had stepped off the doorstep and stood in the middle of the drive. Impatience had changed in his heart to anxiety. And anxiety, with a sudden shiver that shook him from head to foot, had changed to fear. And his heart, like a telegraphic transmitter, was beating this message into his brain:

"She isn't late! She's not coming! She's not coming by this train or any other! The fool! The idiot! She couldn't wait! She bolted with him!"

He rushed into the house, leaving the front door wide open, and up the stairs to his room.

A Wild Desperation

Mrs. Langham stood just without his door. It took courage to knock. She knocked. He did not answer and with a sudden agony of foreboding she pushed the door open.

Manners had kicked off his pumps, and was lacing on a pair of shoes. He looked up when the door opened. His face was ghastly white.

"I don't believe she is coming," he said. "I am going to look for them. There is a train at eleven. I can catch it if I run all the way."

He bent once more over the knotting of his shoelaces; and when this was finished leapt to his feet. The heavy automatic pistol on the table at the head of his bed caught his eye, and he reached out his hand for it.

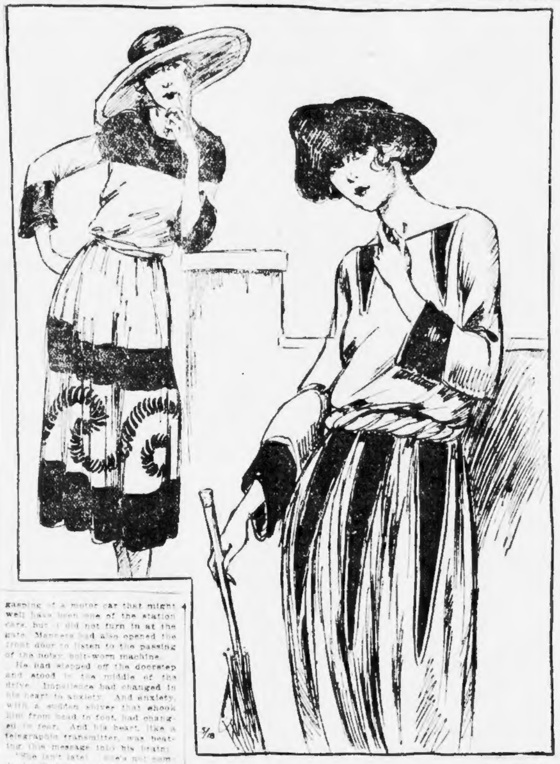
Fresh From Paris



Paris, France.

TWO interesting and different combinations of faille and cloth are shown in these costumes, sketched at the Longchamps races. The lines of both are very simple, the charm of the costumes depending on details of trimming. The frock at the left, of dark brown, almost a tete de negre, has a shoulder yoke, cuffs and skirt bands of fine cloth of the same shade. A novel scroll design in wide silk braid is a feature of the skirt.

The second frock is of dark blue faille and cloth of the same shade. The pointed strips of the cloth are applied all around the skirt and on both the front and back of the bodice. The rolled girdle, suggesting the mediaeval tendency which still prevails, is of scarlet crepe.

And Good Reason Why

They were talking of [illegible]. She had become quite sentimental and the young man was getting a trifle bored.

After some particularly [illegible] remark from his fair companion he roused himself to continue the conversation.

"I remember one [illegible] that brought tears to my eyes," he said.

"Ooooh," she answered. "Oooo— Just like that. It must have been a pathetic subject."

"As a matter of fact," he returned, "I don't know what the subject was, but I happened to be sitting under a heavy picture when the cord broke, and it came down upon my head!"

Hints for the Household

Rice that is served with curry should be beautifully white, dry and every grain separate. Patna rice (the long pointed grain) is the best kind to use, as being less starchy than other kinds. It separates easily.

* * *

To make glassware glisten, wash the glass and rinse in hot water, then plunge into cold water in which a handful of starch has been dissolved. Drain the glassware on towels until perfectly dry, then polish with a soft, dry cloth.

* * *

If half a dozen or so of apricots remain on hand when a tin of them has been opened, put them into a greased pie dish, pour over a nice creamy rice mixture, grate a little nutmeg over and bake.

* * *

Used coffee grounds, well dried, make an excellent emergency knife polish.

Avoiding Ear Troubles

By Brice Belden, M. D.

A CONDITION frequently mistaken for colic in infants or young children is acute inflammation of the middle ear.

The most common symptoms produced by inflammation of the middle ear in children are like those due to colic, which accounts for the frequent confusion of these two conditions. The symptoms common to both are crying, often with sharp screaming and drawing up of the legs, restlessness and vomiting.

Such inflammation of the ear in infants gives many varied symptoms besides those resembling colic, none of which seems to be [illegible] to emanate from the hearing organs. Sometimes it manifests itself simply by slight drowsiness. Any child that suddenly loses interest in its surroundings, takes its feedings without any enthusiasm and then immediately goes to sleep should always be suspected of ear trouble.

In other cases there may be a fever, peevishness, sleeplessness and turning of the head from side to side, symptoms like those often observed in early meningitis.

A third group of these ear [illegible] gives symptoms strongly resembling those of pneumonia. Thus there may be a high fever, rapid and jerky respiration and quick pulse. Until an examination of the ear is made in such cases even experienced physicians may feel quite certain that pneumonia is present.

Every baby that is drowsy, restless, crying, vomiting or feverish should be given the benefit of an examination of the ear drums, which will clear up more puzzling cases than almost any one other procedure, and will give the child immediate relief from its suffering, for if the drum is found to be bulging incision of it will give egress to the pent up pus, thus relieving the pressure producing the pain and jeopardizing the delicate hearing mechanism housed in the middle ear. This simple precaution, if always taken, would make mastoid disease a rare curiosity.

When a Girl Marries

Story of the Interesting Happenings in Life of Young Married Couple

By Anne Lisle

Copyright, 1921, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

THE little room was dimly lighted, but as I made my way to a desk in a far corner I chanced to observe two shadowy forms in an alcove in the further wall. I glanced towards them casually and would have glanced away again at once, but suddenly one of them got up and went out of the room, [illegible] the shadows against the wall as he went out. Then in a natural reaction of curiosity to see the man who so plainly wanted to avoid me, I [illegible] after him.

I got the impression that it was the hat-eared man I'd first seen lounging against the outer wall of the hotel the day we brought Dad Lee there. I took a step or two forward to verify my impression. Then instinctively I turned in my tracks and went toward the alcove. It was empty.

Melts Into Space

"[illegible]" I said to myself. "A minute ago there were two men in that alcove. One of them went out into the lobby, and now the other melts into space while I'm trying to make out who the first is. I wonder if I can have anything to do with this magic disappearance act. Why should that hat-eared man try to avoid me? And why should his companion be running away from me like this? Could it be Lyons?"

Then I repeated aloud, although I didn't realize it,

"Why should anyone be running away from me like this?"

"Who ran away from you, daughter?" queried a voice at my elbow. "You're a [illegible] handsome [illegible], and I'd [illegible] he'd be running after you instead."

I'd turned with a start as I recognized Dad Lee's voice. For one moment I felt a quick reaction to cordiality. Then his words angered me. His praise was as distasteful as Neal's had been gratifying. But more surprising than my feelings were the guarded words that seemed to leap of their own accord to my lips:

"Did Father Andrew find you and send you to me?"

"Was he sleuthing around after me?" asked Dad Lee.

"Oh, then he missed you!" I replied thoughtfully. "But he did go up to call for you."

"'Twasn't him ran away from you, was it, m'dear?" asked Dad Lee with a twist of the lips I took to indicate facetiousness.

"You don't see anyone else around who seems to be trying to avoid me?" I inquired with no abatement of caution.

"Well, you certainly wouldn't expect to be seeing anyone who was trying to run away from you, would you, now, daughter?" he chuckled with an air of triumph just tinged with malice.

"No, you wouldn't expect"—I began and then deliberately switched to, "Now you mustn't belie your own words by running away from me when I invite you to dine with your daughter and Mr. Hyland."

His Idea of Devotion

"Do I ever try to get out of dining with my own daughter?" asked Dad Lee with something like a whimper. "Ain't I been devotion itself since you come back into my life?"

"Since I came back into your life," I repeated.

"Well, supposing it was the other way around. 'Tain't any shorter distance from the starting wire to the finish tape than from the finish tape to the wire, is it? But just tonight it happens I ran across some old friends. I gotta have my supper with them. I'd bid you along, but I don't s'pose you'd leave Hyland to himself, would you?"

Something impelled me to say:

"Why, I might, if you wanted me to meet your friends."

Dad Lee shook his head slowly from side to side. After a minute's thought he replied.

"No, I wouldn't ask you to leave Hyland, and besides these here friends of mine are rough fellows—friends I made following the ponies in the old days. I feel to home with them, but I don't want Martin's thoroughbred filly to meet up with 'em."

"Will they be here long?" I asked.

Something of real import hinged on Dad Lee's reply. If he were busy—occupied with his own friends—he wouldn't expect, he wouldn't even care to meet my friends. And yet, while I reproached myself for attitude of snobbishness I realized that I wasn't proud of my father and didn't want to see much of him, much less take him about in the Harrison family and world.

"Sure, they'll be here awhile," announced Dad Lee. "They're located right hereabouts. I'll be running with them a lot. I got good pals, m'dear. I got mighty good pals even if I've outgrown their ways and settled down in my old age. They like to keep up with me. And I like to keep up with them, whether or not I want my filly to trot in their class. It's different with them."

"So I've been told," I commented dryly, adding in great relief: "Here comes Father Andrew. I was just thinking I ought to go look for him."

"Had a caller, Mr. Lee?" asked Father Andrew after they had exchanged greetings.

"How'd you know?" bristled my father.

"Oh, when I didn't find you in your room I asked the telephone girl if she could locate you and she said a man had called you an hour or so ago. And he didn't give his name, but she guessed you knew him all right, because she saw you crossing the lobby toward the reception rooms with him right afterward."

A Hidden Decision

"All right, all right!" interrupted my father peevishly, adding quickly: "Where you folks going to have supper? Over at that place Anne took us the first night I was back?"

"I don't know. Where would you like to have your dinner, Babbie?" asked Father Andrew with instinctive gallantry.

"Oh, let's scout around and find a place," I began. Then I took a sudden decision. "Why not stay here?"

"Here it is. Then that suits with your approval, Mr. Lee?" asked Father Andrew.

"No, I'm going out. To meet friends. Old pals of mine. We ain't going to eat here," replied Dad Lee, starting toward the door.

"Don't go without an overcoat. It's chilly," admonished Father Andrew.

Mechanically Dad Lee turned and made his way toward the alcove where I'd seen the two shadowy figures a few moments before. Stooping down to a couch far back in the dim alcove he grabbed up a coat and hurried away without another word.

I narrowed my eyes in calculation as I stared after him. It was clear now that he had been one of the shadowy figures that had slunk away when I came into the room. Had the other been the hat-eared man my last glimpse of whom had been with Lyons?

I turned to Father Andrew to blurt out the amazing coincidence. But I stopped short. Why hurt him again by my undaughterly attitude toward my father?

Attack on Chafee Meant as Threat to Other Teachers

The evil of the attempt to get rid of Professor Chafee of Harvard for bringing to light the evil results of the attack by government and courts and big business interests upon that cornerstone of liberty—freedom of speech and of the press—is not that it will succeed in throwing Professor Chafee out of Harvard and of blackballing him from any other educational institution. We doubt very much if the forces behind this drive against freedom of expression by our teachers have the effrontery to make a real attempt to remove Professor Chafee, for they must know as intelligent men that it needs very little more of this kind of oppression and slave-making procedure on the part of the defenders of special privilege in this country to arouse the self-respect of our teachers and higher institutions to a point where a great majority of them will throw overboard Lowell's rule of caution:

Not a thing will he do or a word will he utter,
Until he weighs its relations to plain bread and butter, and will organize to defend themselves and the freedom of American educational institutions with a total disregard of personal consequences.

When that day comes, and our American college professors and high schools teachers decide that they stand at Armageddon so far as their intellectual freedom is concerned, it will be a sad day for reaction in this country. We must assume that those who are conducting this drive against Professor Chafee will be careful not to continue it too far. We imagine that the real object of the drive is not to destroy him, but to humiliate him. We suspect that it is only a species of white terror against men in our colleges who are independent thinkers and have more or less the courage of their convictions.

The real object, we have very little doubt, of this investigation of Professor Chafee is to warn the other teachers that the line of least resistance is the safest—that if they have opinions which are hostile to the interests of the American workmen or of the average citizen or of the majority, they may express them with safety and even with personal advantage, but if they have opinions which are inconvenient to the interests of the privileged minority they had better leave those opinions unexpressed, for the consequences are likely to prove very inconvenient to the personal fortunes of those teachers who are imprudent enough to express them.

Promise of Prohibition Law Enforcement Good News

The assurance which United States District Attorney Harris gives us that special efforts will be made on the part of the United States law-enforcing machinery to carry out prohibition, is good news.

We must not expect that a new law making an offence, what a large part of the community believes is not an offence, will be as completely enforced as a law creating some other kind of offence which has been enforced long enough to make ALL the community recognize it as an offence.

Most of our laws against anti-social acts, even against stealing and murder, have had to pass through the stages through which the prohibition law is now passing. First a bare majority of the socially more sensitive part of the community makes what was lawful cease to be lawful against the approval of a great minority and it takes years to make the violation of this law opprobrious as well as dangerous, and the law is not completely effective until it has been enforced long enough to make anyone who violates it realize that his neighbors will condemn him and that he will suffer social ostracism as well as the pains and penalties of the law.

The prohibition law is even now well enough enforced to bring great good to the community and its benefits are already manifesting themselves, and as these benefits unfold, a larger and larger part of the community which resisted prohibition will be convinced that after all prohibition is a good thing, and, when the unregenerates reach an insignificant number, then the prohibition law will be like the law against stealing and will be aided by public opinion as effectively as this latter law, which often brings a man to suicide when he is detected, for it is the fear of public opinion and not the fear of a few years in jail that drives a man to kill himself rather than to face disgrace.

Builders' Strike Tends to Deplete City's Population

The chairman of the City of Boston Rent and Housing Committee told the newspapers last Wednesday that the number of complaints concerning the action of landlords would probably reach a new high level very soon. They already amount to more than 9,500 in number.

This emphasizes the misfortune which the community is suffering on account of the quarrel between the master builders and the artisans. This quarrel ought to be adjusted or the State and city ought to begin operations to relieve the serious shortage in homes for our community, because nothing will deplete our population more quickly than the lack of proper housing facilities.

Boston as Gateway for Aliens

We hope that the government will persist in its present plans to develop the port of Boston as a more important gateway for the entry of aliens who intend to make this country their home.

Ellis Island is overcrowded and the general harbor conditions of New York are congested. Aliens arriving here destined for the Northwest and Central West will find it as convenient to make Boston their point of departure as New York, and the conditions under which they will be controlled here pending their absorption in the great Hinterland will be very much better than at Ellis Island.

Moreover it may, if we are enterprising, enable us to persuade some of them to take up our abandoned New England farms and reduce our cost of living by the intensified agriculture to which many of them are accustomed in their native land.

Happier Lives for the People

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

OH, ye men who prate of college,
And of books as doors to hope,
Go and give the living knowledge
Where the toiling people grope;
Like the plants in shadowy places,
They are needing sun to bloom,
They are hungering for life's graces,
They are wanting light and room.

Give them something more of pleasure
Than ten-million-dollar tomes;
Give them work, and give them leisure,
Give them clubs and give them homes,
Open wide the door of beauty
And invite the people in—
And you'll find the paths of duty
Better filled than paths of sin.

Oh, I can't sit debating
On the issues of a creed
With the mighty work that's waiting
And the world's tremendous need;
And the cold, dogmatic steeple
Brings no pennies from my purse,
While the people, people, people
Groan beneath oppression's curse.

While the tenements are reeking
With the striving, toiling poor,
Do not send your churchmen seeking
Help for "heathens" to my door.
Let them go where sin carouses,
Or where seething sweatshops stand,
Let them see the slaughter houses
Of the children of our land.

True reform has one beginning,
The right hand of brotherhood,
Would you help men out of sinning;
Would you lead them into good?
Would you teach that Christ has risen?
Prove it by your deeds of worth.
If you want to close the prison,
Beautify the homes of earth.

YEARS AGO.
I HELPED.
TO BUILD a house
IN WHICH I lived.
WHEN IT was built
FOR MANY years.
AND THEN moved out
AND WENT away
AND YESTERDAY,
I WENT back there
TO SEE the house
AND WANDERED past
AND SOMEHOW,
AS I gazed on it
FROM 'CROSS the street
IT SEEMED to me
IT SAW me there
AND WAS ashamed
FOR SAD to tell.
SINCE WE were friends
AND SAID farewell.
I TO the house
AND IT to me,
IT MUST have been
THAT DIRE days
HAD COME to it
OR ELSE.
IT DRANK a lot
AND STAYED up nights
OR SOME such thing.
AND LIVING so
IT'S HAD no time
AND HAD no funds
TO DRESS itself
AND GROWING poor
IN SHABBY clothes.
IT LOST that thing
IT USED to have
WHEN WE were friends.
THAT LOOK of cheer
THAT USED to come
FROM OFF the lawn
AND DOWN the steps
FROM OFF the porch,
AND THROUGH the panes
OF WINDOW glass
AND BID me welcome
DAY OR night
WHEN I'D come home.
AND AS I stood
ACROSS THE street
AND VIEWED my friend,
FROM OUT the door
THERE CAME a man
WHO LOOKED to me
AS THOUGH he drank
AND STAYED up nights,
OR SOME such things.

I THANK you.

WHY NOT REVERSE THE ORDER

The government would probably be able to pay everybody a bonus if it didn't cost so much to get the Supreme Court to undo the work of the Congress after all the expense of having the Congress show that it pays no attention to the Constitution.

MAKEUP AND ORIGIN OF SHOOTING STARS

By Garrett P. Serviss

"Please tell me what a meteor is made of and where it comes from. Is it like a shooting star? Is it hot when it starts to fall to the earth?—Miss Ethel Muth, Minneapolis, Minn."

ASTRONOMERS employ the word "meteors" to describe what are popularly called "shooting stars." They are not stars at all, but small particles of stony or metallic matter that probably do not average an ounce in weight (although some are much larger), but that are burned up in the air because of the great velocity with which they move, varying from seven or eight up to forty-five miles per second, according to whether they overtake the earth in its orbit or meet it head-on.

First Velocity

They get this great velocity by travelling around the sun in very long orbits resembling those of comets, as if each minute particle were an independent body. Going so fast, the friction of their rush through the air heats them almost instantly to incandescence.

It has been computed that in much of the space through which the earth passes in the course of a year's journey around the sun these little bodies are distributed at an average distance of 250 miles apart, but in certain regions they are much more thickly arrayed. When the earth goes through these particular regions the meteors sometimes appear like flakes of fiery snow.

Already Heated

Of course they are not heated before they enter the air. We do not know by direct evidence what a meteor is made of, but there is reason to believe that no meteor contains any kind of matter not already known on the earth.

This conclusion is strengthened by the fact that there is another class of these bodies, known to astronomers as meteorites, which make a great display of light as they rush through the sky, often bursting asunder in mid-flight, as if they were shells fired by some invisible dreadnought bombarding the earth from celestial space, and some of which actually reach the ground.

These bodies consist either of stony matter, resembling the constituents of ordinary rocks, such as carbon, iron, aluminum, magnesium, silicon, calcium, sodium, together with oxygen, nitrogen, etc., or they are dense masses composed almost entirely of iron with a little intermixture of nickel, cobalt and a few minerals.

Letters to the Editor

Why a League of Women Voters?

Editor Boston American:

The Massachusetts League of Women Voters is soon to hold its annual meeting. Its growth has been rapid. At the end of its first year it has already seventy branches throughout the State.

Some of the politicians are asking what need there is for a League of Women Voters—why the women's Republican and Democratic party organizations are not enough. The best answer is to be seen in the effectiveness of the Anti-Saloon League.

Whether he favors prohibition or not, no one will deny that the Anti-Saloon League has been highly efficient. Its members have continued to be Republicans and Democrats, they have not ceased to work in and through their parties; but on the question of prohibition, which was not a party issue they found they could accomplish more by having an organization of their own to push it. Does anyone fancy they could have done as much if they had worked for it only in and through their parties?

The members of the League of Women Voters belong to all parties. Its leaders encourage every woman to enroll in the party of her choice and to work with it. But there are some important questions—mostly questions affecting women and children—which are not an issue between the parties, and in which women are vitally interested. To secure legislation on these, and to promote good citizenship, they have formed the League of Women Voters.

With the object lesson of the Anti-Saloon League before their eyes, the women would be short-sighted indeed if they let the politicians persuade them that they could do it just as well without an organization formed for that definite purpose.

EDUCATION EXPENSES OF THE U. S.

By P. P. Claxton,

U. S. Commissioner of Education.

CONSIDERED alone, expenditures for public education in the United States may seem large. Figures and comparisons recently published in many newspapers show how small they are when compared with expenditures for other purposes, public and private.

These expenditures are also small in comparison with the number of children to be educated. We may forget that there are in the United States more than twenty-seven million boys and girls, between the ages of six and nineteen, that is, between the age at which children in most States enter school and the age of those who graduate from the high school, having gone through the grades of the elementary school and the high school without the loss of more than one year. If children of kindergarten age are counted in, there are more than thirty millions.

Estimating the Cost

Just how much do we pay for the education of these children?

The amount spent on an average in the public schools of each of the States for the education of each child of the generation of children entering school in the Fall of 1905, and reaching the normal age of high school graduation in 1918, was from $82 per individual person in Alabama and Mississippi to $801 in Montana, the Montana rate being almost exactly ten times that of Alabama and Mississippi. The Massachusetts rate was $[illegible]. The average for the United States was only $255.

This is computed from reports made to the United States Bureau of Education. It should be remembered that these figures include not only the cost of instruction, but also expenditures for buildings, grounds, equipment, repairs, fuel and all incidentals, including in many cities and States books and supplies.

Since less than 70 per cent of all the money expended for public schools goes for instruction, only $175 of the $255 was paid for actual instruction. We frequently have complaints that the instruction and training of the boys and girls who leave the schools is not as extensive and thorough as it should be. What should we expect for $175?

For the generation of boys and girls reaching the age of high school graduation in 1906, the average per capita was $140. For the elementary and secondary education of the millions of men and women in the United States now between the ages of twenty-one and thirty-five the average paid was $200.

As to what would be spent on the average for the education of each child of those (something more than two and a quarter millions) who reached the school age of six years in 1918, if the average expenditures for that year were to be continued until 1931, when those boys and girls will have reached the normal age of graduation from the high school, in only one State would the amount be less than $100, and the average for the United States would be $329. The figures for Montana are no doubt too large, the number of children of school age in that State in 1918 being larger than the number calculated on the basis of the estimates of the total population made by the Bureau of Census. The same is probably true, but in a smaller degree, for California.

How much at the rate of expenditure in 1918 would be paid for all education, elementary, secondary, higher, technical and professional, that is, how much would be spent on the average for all the school education of all the children in public elementary schools and high schools and in colleges, universities, technical and professional schools of all kinds? The range would be from $111 in Mississippi to $1,274 in Montana.

To this $440 should be added about $75—probably not quite so much—for expenditures of private schools of all kinds, elementary and secondary, private commercial schools and schools for the deaf, the blind, the feeble minded and other special classes of children.

The grand total of $515 represents what at the 1918 rate the people of the United States would pay on an average for all the opportunities of education, public and private, higher and lower, for all the differences which schooling makes between a generation of total illiterates, lacking in all the training of the schools, and the condition we would have as the result of a continuation of the 1918 rate of expenditure for education and training in the schools.

As a matter of investment and business economy alone the thoughtful man will ask: Does it pay to spend an average of $515 on the education of the children of the nation, or would it be better to save this money, close all our public schools and let the next generation of men and women depend wholly on their unspoiled and unimproved native ability?
